Background Information:

History: St. Benedict's Prep. was founded as St. Benedict's College in 1868 with 20 students and 4 teachers. The stated purpose of the new school was to provide an affordable education - in either "Classical" or "Commercial" college courses, or in "Preparatory" courses - to the children of Catholic immigrants and the Catholic middle class in Newark and its environs. In addition, the monks of St. Mary's Abbey sought to encourage spiritual and cultural growth in their students. However, it was not until 1914 that the students began to publish the Saint Benedict's College Quarterly; a combination of a school newspaper, an alumni newsletter, a literary magazine, and an annual yearbook. In 1917, the name of the school was officially changed to St. Benedict's Preparatory School as a result of the discontinuation of all college-level curriculum at the school in 1910. Two years later, in 1919, St. Benedict's put out the first Maroon Telolog; a yearbook that essentially replaced the Saint Benedict's College Quarterly.

It was not until 1931 that St. Benedict's Prep students began publishing an official school newspaper. Called The Gray Bee, its publication was heavily supported by Headmaster Fr. Boniface Reger, who wanted to expand St. Benedict's excellent reputation in sports into academics and cultural endeavors.
